Mr. Stontz wrapped up October's theme of "stewardship" on Wednesday with a little review and teaching about the parable of the talents from Matthew 25. This parable brought together all of our key points from the month such as taking care of what you have because it all belongs to God, using your time, things, and money wisely, and living like we know what really matters. Mr. Stontz interviewed three volunteers (shown on the right, Torah J., Nathanael N., and Lucas J.) to help illustrate the importance of developing our gifts and taking care of what we have. Each student was chosen because of a gift they have: Torah for her piano skills; Nathanael for his math skills; and Lucas for serving his parents with his dish washing skills. ☺ Lucas told us that he washes the dishes for his parents once a week; Nathanael showed off his multiplication table skills; and Torah even played a song on the piano for the entire elementary school! The main point in interviewing these students was to drive home the point about "using it or losing it," based upon the parable of the talents in Matthew 25.
