MY NEXT STEP - GRANT FIELDS

Grant has always been interested in business so that was a major factor for him as he started the college planning process. Since college is expensive, he wants to make sure he will get the most out of this experience. These factors were in mind as he started touring colleges. He toured a total of six and also talked a lot with his older brother who had toured a number of colleges as well. This gave Grant a good foundation for making a choice. When he toured Baylor University, he noticed it had everything he was hoping for in a college experience: the best business program out of all of the colleges he toured, a great location, lots to do on campus, and an active community outside of the college campus. It also helped a lot that his older brother attends Baylor and has had a great experience so far. Grant's parents were very supportive of him on this journey and encouraged him to get things done early. This helped bring his stress level down as he received college acceptance letters early in his senior year. He is ready for the next step and will be attending Baylor's freshman orientation week in July. Grant knows that his college years will require more study and discipline. He appreciates how Legacy has prepared him and taught him to grow in his faith, and is eager to begin his Baylor University experience next fall.

MY NEXT STEP - EVAN KOZLOWSKI

Evan spent much of his high school career not really knowing what he might want to do, but he did know that college was his goal. Once he started thinking more seriously about it, he considered both private and public options. He ruled out being in the city, but also didn't feel a small college would be the best fit. Throughout this process, he was able to narrow his choices down to two colleges. He toured them both and thought they each had a great campus, a great location, nice dorms, and good programs. He finally decided on the University of Minnesota – Duluth because he really likes the city of Duluth and he'll have access to good snowboarding. He's still not sure what career area he will pursue and it's a little stressful not knowing his roommate or really anyone at the college. However, he's excited to live on his own and have lots of snowboarding opportunities.
